Haiti.

We hear so much about Haiti and the support given through donations such as shoes, commodities, food, tractors, etc. Giving from guilt has hurt more than it has provided momentum in Haiti. It seems that there is a mentality associated with Haiti and it goes like this. I will give stuff to Haiti and feel like I have made Haiti flourish through my generous donation of goods. Somehow we can ride in on a white horse, dump tons of materials and goods, and leave patting each other on the back like something has been accomplished. Unfortunately, that is not the way to effect change in a nation. We must work from within to create effective leaders or leaders capable of operating in their own marketplace. You can give a young kid a car, but they will fail unless they are taught how to drive it.

What does Haiti need?

Haiti needs leadership. Leadership is rooted, in the word of God, drawing from the wellspring of life, servant leadership. Haiti needs perspective changes, and renewing of the mind. They must be empowered. We must feed into the drive that is already there. Growth, engage in the arduous journey of mentorship. Haiti needs expectations, standards to rise to, and a mission to accomplish. They've received enough handouts. We must be strategic and endure.

This is what will change a nation. This is the right course of action. A good seed must be planted to produce good fruit in Haiti. Elite has accepted the challenge and we have partnered with the Legacy Relief Project along with multiple other organizations to have the greatest chance of success. Elite teams are committed to training, leading, and helping those with incredible potential to overcome. Our goal is to train leaders and create a sustainable model where Haitians can engage Haitians in the marketplace, schools, prisons, and government.

As donors and partners, the time to take action is now. We can make a difference that will impact the nation. We can make a difference that will impact a People, and we can make a difference that will impact an individual! See you on the field. San Pedro Sula

Elite has now become a household name in the murder capitol of Honduras. Students and parents alike are infatuated with the idea for change. Elite Honduras is now training future leaders and will lead school officials through the training as well.

I was told by the school administrator that the students have never been more compliant and driven to succeed. She said "This will have such an impact on the country of Honduras" She wants it in as many schools as possible.

Leaders are emerging and multiplying

We have started our classes 002, 003, and 004. These 6 month initial courses followed by 1 1/2 years of implementation are engaging the future leadership of Honduras.

Hondurans are training Hondurans. This has become so effective, we are taking 2 leaders and flying them to Haiti as missionary ambassadors of Elite Teams. They will be tasked with starting the process in Haiti.
